“Allow me to emphasize on the importance of investing on human capital at the local level. Human capital investment is an important expenditure because it aims at improving the quality of human resource considering the fact that Municipal Managers are the main production factors in the delivery of services. I also want to emphasize that good human resource development practices can make a big difference on the performance of organizations and their positions in the economy. I urge our governments to make use of human resource development by implementing strategies, procedures and systems to educate, train and induct Territorial Managers as well as Local Elected Officials to make meaningful contribution to the achievement of municipal, individual and community goals.

I would like to conclude by highlighting that the human capital is the backbone and main resource of any local government. Local governments in Africa should retain an efficient and effective human capital since they are governments at grassroots and they have responsibility to account for service delivery and well-being of local people. On behalf of Specialised Technical Committee (STC) No.8 on Public Service, Local Government, Urban Development and Decentralisation, I align with resolution No. 72/235 adopted by the General Assembly of the Unites Nations on Human Resource Development”.
VI- MAIN RECOMMENDATIONS FROM FORUM WORK
The Forum gave rise to about fifty presentations and interventions that generated fruitful debates and a series of recommendations on both the African Agenda and Global Agendas. These recommendations will be the subject of a complete report which will be distributed to all Forum participants.

The fact remains that the main and most decisive recommendation for us is the problem of financing education, learning, training and capacity building for local actors, local elected officials, local elected representatives and human resources of the African Local Governments, object of Ifrane Call for Action.
